ARCHITECTS' NEW WRINKLE

Will Model House in Plaster For the Prospective Owner.

"If a man of wealth wants to build a house these days, all he has to do is to go to a prominent architect, tell him just what he wants and how he wants it, and before a spade is stuck in the ground the prospective house owner can see just exactly how his ideas have been carried out by looking at a perfect model of the proposed structure," said F. B. Vincent, a New York architect, to a Washington Star man at the New Willard.

"Many a man is absolutely disappointed in his house when it has been completed from a set of plans on paper that have met his approval. He did not know how this or that would look, and such changes as he desires may be impossible on account of the construction. The consequence is the man is never satisfied. In order to obviate this architects who are up to date have undertaken to model all proposed houses in plaster when it is the wish of the man who wants the building erected. The entire exterior of the house is molded after the plans approved by the applicant, and if the finished house (in plaster) does not suit him it can be entirely remodeled until it does, and the cost is not so very great. Of course the in can be changed at will."

MAINE LOG CUT FOR 1902-03

Season's Product Will Be Approximately 800,000,000 Feet.

Returns from the various logging sections of Maine show that the season's cut will be approximately 800,000,000 feet, over half of which is spruce. About 300,000,000 feet, says the Springfield Republican, will be ground up in pulp mills, and the rest will be used for lumber.

This vast harvest has called for the employment of about 10,000 men, many of whom went into the woods early in the fall to make the camps ready for the lumber jacks, and nearly $4,000,000 has been paid to them in wages. Now that the trees are down and the logs on the water's edge the drive will soon begin, and the prospects for a good one are excellent. The season will be a profitable one for the state, but if the wholesale slaughter of trees continues for a few years more and no care is taken to preserve the forests even the vast Maine wilderness will fall, and the pulp mills and the lumber men will be idle.
